

What is an Employer of Record?

An Employer of Record (EOR) allows you to hire around the globe without setting up a legal entity. The EOR serves as the legal employer while you manage and direct the daily work of your new team member.

What does an EOR do?

The EOR handles:

Payroll: Puts professionals on its locally compliant payroll.

Taxes: Makes the appropriate tax deductions and filings.

Benefits: Allows your clients to offer competitive benefits packages.

Compliance: Generates local compliant employment contracts and takes on all responsibilities for complying with laws and regulations.

How can an EOR help your clients?

Test new markets

Quickly and seamlessly, your clients can hire in multiple international markets simultaneously. Drive value for your clients with an EOR, so they can test new markets practically risk-free.

Access global talent

To be competitive at an international level, companies need to attract top talent. An EOR facilitates access to the best global talent by offering a locally compliant contract and attractive benefits packages.

Manage risk

During expansions, companies need legal and financial experts to help them navigate local laws, and any mistakes along the way could significantly compromise business goals. When your clients work with an EOR, they are free to focus on their day-to-day operations while the EOR absorbs all the risk of compliance associated with local laws and regulations.
